National Counseling Group, Inc., a leader in the provision of quality mental health and substance use treatment for over 15 years, is inviting the public to stop in for fellowship, food, and door prizes as they celebrate the opening of its newest office in Warrenton, Virginia. The open house, scheduled for Friday January 30th from 11:00 am to 2:00 pm, will provide community members the opportunity to learn more about this agency's philosophy and best practices used by some of the most well-trained and respected clinicians in the region to treat children, adults and families. Julie Turner, Director of National Counseling Group's Warrenton Office, stated, "After serving the mental health and substance abuse needs of Fauquier County for five years, we are very pleased and excited to be opening a local office, which allows us to become more connected with the county. We look forward to increasing our involvement with the community, local agencies, and service providers to enhance comprehensive, community-based mental health and substance abuse treatment."

Conveniently located at 400 Holiday Court Suite 202 in Warrenton, the new office will continue NCG's vision of providing an array of community-based counseling, Therapeutic Foster Care and Therapeutic Day Treatment services that bridge the gap between traditional mental health therapies and contemporary modalities such as multi-systemic and evidence-based programming. An innovative and compassionate organization, National Counseling Group's mission includes advocacy for increased access and availability of services, public-private partnerships, community education and support and swift response times to those seeking help. Among the clinical services offered in Fauquier County are community-based services for youth, adults and families funded by Medicaid.
